An address given by Mrs Clark Colburg S.D., on the "Development of Character in the Public School" proved of great interest, pointing out very clearly the manner in which the life of the scholar was affected by the groundwork taught in the school-age period.
A demonstration of a literature lesson in Grade VI. was given by Miss Ranks, Wainwright S.D., and proved of value and service to the convention, and the convention work of the day closed with a talk by Mr Reed, of Irma S.D., on "My one-room High School. This was of value from the fact that there are very few one-room schools of this nature in the province. The evening session on Thursday consisted of a lecture in the theatre by Professor Burt, of Alberta university, on "What is the world coming to which was delivered to an overcrowded building. After the lecture and a short musical programme of musical numbers, the floor was cleared and for several hours a truly happy bunch of teachers and friends enjoyed themselves in the maze of the dance.
Friday's sessions began with a demonstration of a rural school in operation, Miss Brunner, Heath S.D. and several of her little pupils holding the attention to the delight of all, and Miss Fleming, Lakeland S.D., and Miss Wilcox, Kinsella S.D., then gave addresses on seat-work in different grades which was of great value to all teachers and proved instructive as well as interesting. The principles of giving seat-work was also spoken to by Mr Saul, Killarney S.D.
The Rev. J. McLagan, spoke on Friday afternoon to the convention, his subject "Canadian Citizenship" being listened to with rapt attention, and receiving the deserved applause at the close, and in an address by Mr McNally on "A course in citizenship" which followed was most aptly timed and pointed out the analogy of his points as compared with the topic of the previous speaker.

The following are further rules for safety from the awful fire menace which increases greatly during the winter months of the year:—
Candles should never be taken into closets where they may ignite inflammable materials.
Use metal oil lamps, not glass ones. Have lamps with solid, heavy bases. Be sure that the wick fits snugly. Keep the burner clean and oil it occasionally with soda, lye, or a strong soap solution.
Keep the wick trimmed evenly. Fill the lamp by daylight only. Be sure that the burner is tightly screwed into place.
Wipe the reservoir clean.
Do not set the lamp near the edge of a table or in any place where it may overturn.
Do not set it too close to curtains or anything that will take fire easily.
Do not leave a burning lamp too long unwatched.
Do not leave the house without extinguishing it.
Use "Safety" matches which strike only on the box.
Do not buy matches which break loose their heads or glow after being put out.
Never throw away a match until every spark is out.
If matches are spilled, pick up every one.
Do not carry matches loose; children do not need to play them at all.
Matches should be kept out of the reach of little children.
Keep the heat of stoves or fireplaces from the heat of covered books away

Three of the lads were nominated for a seat in the "house", these being G. Taylor, W. Mitchell and D. Peterson, the election to take place next month.
Among the speakers present were Mr Wallace Forgie, Mr R. J. Love, M.L.A. and Mr J. McAllister, all their addresses being listened to with attention especially the latter who gave an illustrated lecture on Friday evening.
On Saturday evening the lads were entertained to chicken supper by the ladies of Grace church at the restaurant and during the day they entered keen-

TEACHERS OF WAINWRIGHT INSPECT. ANNUAL CONVENTION

We are indebted to Miss Lucy Withnell, the secretary, for the following report of the annual teachers' convention held last week, and acknowledge thanks.
The fifth annual convention of the teachers of the Wainwright inspection met at Wainwright on October 16th and 17th.
After registration, Mayor Gerow opened the convention with an address of welcome, which was followed by a letter of welcome from Mr Bowman of the School Board which was read by Mr Nelson in the absence of the former gentleman. Miss Jells, of Valley S.D., answered in a few appropriate words, thanking the people of Wainwright for their kindness, and acknowledging the purposes of the convention.
The nominating committee was then elected, comprising Mr McShane Velve S.D., Mr Saul, Killarney S.D., and Miss McKay, Ribstone S.D. while the following were the members of resolutions committee—Mr Line Grandgeville S.D., Mrs Clark, S.D. and Miss Brunner, Heath S.D.
Mr Rogers, then gave an address on "The heritage we leave with our scholars" which was an inspiring theme and received close attention. This being followed by a discussion on the course of studies for the high school, led by the same speaker.
The "modernization of Arithmetic" which was a very interesting topic, laid bare the origin and evolution of arithmetic, and methods of teaching this subject were freely discussed.
At this point Mr Barnett, of the Teachers' Alliance, addressed the convention on the desirability and necessity of every teacher joining that organization.
The afternoon programme opened with an interesting lesson on "Phonics" taught by Miss M. Kain, of Wainwright S.D. This being followed by an address by Mr McNally, of Edmonton, on "The Course of Studies".
An address given by Mrs Clark Colburg S.D., on the "Development of Character in the Public School" proved of great interest, pointing out very clearly the manner in which the life of the scholar was affected by the groundwork taught in the school-age period.

There passed away at Edgerton, at the residence of his daughter Mrs W. Challenger, on October 15th, Mr John Boyd, who has been visiting there for the past five weeks, at the age of 89 years.
The deceased gentleman was only taken sick on Sunday evening, and although everything was done to relieve the sufferer, nothing availed and he died on Wednesday morning.
The body was shipped to Mount Forest, Ont. for burial, the Rev. J. Smith, of Edgerton, conducting a funeral service at the house the night previous to the early morning train.
He leaves to mourn his loss six children, two other children and his wife having predeceased him.
The sympathies of the community are extended to the relatives in the loss they have sustained. The body was accompanied east by Mr A. Boyd who came from his home in Saskatoon in time to see his father before death.

STOP PRESS NEWS
OIL REFINERY FOR WAINWRIGHT
As we go to press, we learn that arrangements are under way to build and establish an OIL REFINERY here in the Wainwright field.
This is being undertaken by the Great West Refiners & Refinery Ltd., and is for the purpose of refining the products of this field into the numerous grades of lubricating oil which are in such demand that Canada imports no less than $7,000,000 worth of this material from the States every year.
This is truly a boost for the field, and The Star sincerely hopes that the arrangements now on the tapis will be carried to a happy consummation, as we learn that if successful the company intend to commence operations right away.

The reports of the committee were then presented and the following from the resolutions committee were passed unanimously:—
"That the teachers of the Wainwright inspectorate request that the Department of Education be definitely approached to supply sending pamphlets with or without dictation exercises."
"That the teachers of the Wainwright inspectorate desire to tender our sincere thanks to the citizens of Wainwright for their kind welcome and hospitality."
"That the teachers of the Wainwright inspectorate desire to express our sincere thanks to Rev. Mr. McLagan and all who have assisted in any way to make this convention so successful."
"That the opinion of this convention is that a minimum list of supplementary readers should be prepared with prices attached and a copy be sent to the teachers; this to be used as a basis by the inspector when making his recommendations to the districts."
The election of officers which followed resulted as follows:—
Hon Pres—Mr M. O. Nelson
Pres—Mrs Clark, Colburg S.D.
Vice-pres—Mr Reed, Irma S.D.
Sec-treas—Miss Douglas, Chauvin S.D.
Executive Com—Miss Brunner Heath S.D., W. Suckling Wainwright S.D., and G. Thompson, Beehive S.D.
The convention closed with the National Anthem.

MORE OF THE TRUTH ABOUT OUR OIL SITUATION

Facts and data concerning the Wainwright Oil Field have already been published which should be sufficient to awaken the dormant intelligence of any community. It is not necessary to enumerate results of the past ten years drilling but suffice it to say that there is not a duster in the whole lot. The aptitude and lack of enthusiasm on the part of our Canadian public is quite sufficient to make one's blood curdle. Flowing oil wells of very high grade oil with tremendous production of the richest gasoline gas on this Continent does not seem to awaken our citizens from their lethargic slumber.

We have been requested to reproduce Dr. C. C. Conter's article "O CANADA" which appeared in the issue of this Journal on the 22nd of September, wherein he attacks a certain big corporation who are evidently bent on grabbing our valuable fields to their own advantage and the detriment of Canada—True it is that it takes time and much money to develop an oil field, but inasmuch as that has now been spent with the result as stated, we ask if it is not high time for our people to wake up—Yes, wake up with no uncertain sound, and show to the world that we in Western Canada do not intend to be caught sleeping at the switch, and allow the octopus to swallow whole the oil which is the lifeblood of our people. Canada do not intend to be caught sleeping at the switch, and allow the octopus to swallow whole the oil which is the lifeblood of our people.

The well was not down to the Credit rate of One hundred barrels per hour for Three hours, or equal to Twenty four hundred barrels per day, and witnessed by hundreds of Alberta Citizens. The well No. 1 and well No. 2 have an estimated flow of fourteen million cubic feet of wet gas and Mr Newton W. Emmens, Engineer for the B.P. Company stated in his report published in the Edmonton Bulletin dated August 11th 1923 that this gas contained 3 gallons of gasoline per 1,000 cubic feet of gas, being equivalent to forty-two thousand gallons of gasoline per twenty four hours, and that this test was made at both the Alberta and British Columbia Universities in its presence.

If this statement is true, and we say it is true, does it not make this wet gas discovery the greatest and most valuable discovery on this entire continent. Just imagine what forty-two thousand gallons of gasoline per day at ten cents per gallon means (not 40 cents, the price of gasoline in Alberta to-day). It is exactly $4,200.00 dollars per day, or one million five hundred and thirty three thousand dollars per annum at ten cents per gallon, and at 40 cents per gallon is over six million dollars per annum and known as much oil to exist in this "Canadian" oil.

Well No. 1 well of this company, the unfortunate accident which happened there, of the biter being left at the bottom of the hole, has precluded the possibility of the well "coming in" until further work is done on it; but hundreds saw the volume of wet gas and the traces of oil which came from the hole before this happened. The No. 3 well has already produced some oil and is now being cored lower to hit the Credit sands, which are known to exist at a short distance.
Well No. 4 is into big production. The large sum excavated to receive the oil is now on view to show this production—Would it not seem, that in the light of the above facts, to say nothing of other wells in the district that the Wainwright oil field has good and needs no further demonstration to prove the existence of an immense oil field in our very midst?
It would now seem as though our only salvation is in supporting the various small independent companies who are now operating, and attempting to bring in more wells.
The pumps arrived on Tuesday for the B.P. and we understand that these will be put to work right away to test actual quantities at the No 2 and No 4 wells of this company.

BRITISH PETROLEUMS NOW IN CHARGE MR. T. J. SUGARS

According to a report published in the Edmonton Journal field operations of the British Petroleum company will be placed on a changed basis as the result of reorganization that is now being carried into effect. The closing of offices at Edmonton and removal of them to Wainwright, along with the resignations of the N. W. Emmens, former superintendent and V. C. Lamb, assistant, was announced on Friday morning by T. J. Sugars, Edmonton director of the B. P. company.

Under the new arrangement Mr Sugars will be in charge of the field operations at Wainwright with Bert Travis next in command as chief driller.

Asked as to present field operations Mr Sugars stated that the derrick for No. 5 well has been finished and the machinery is now being installed. A water well has been drilled and it is expected that actual drilling of the oil hole will commence in ten days. It is the intention to use the fuel from No. 4 well as this has given satisfactory results on initial tests. It is the intention to complete drilling at No. 5 and No. 3 wells this season, if weather conditions permit.

There is little doing at No. 4 well, which was brought in as a producer some weeks ago. A pump is now in transit from Vancouver and should be delivered shortly. It will take around ten days to install it and get it in operation and then the capacity of the well should be fully proved. Oil is still flowing from the well while the gas pressure is holding up well.
At No. 3 B.P. well slow progress is being made, as coring is going on, but the prospects are excellent, says Mr Sugars. Explaining some of the mystery connected with this well, Mr Sugars points out that when the first sand was reached, it was found to be mixed with shale. Oil was plainly visible in the core.

At the time it was known that the drill was not down to the Credit rate of One hundred barrels per hour for Three hours, or equal to Twenty four hundred barrels per day, and witnessed by hundreds of Alberta Citizens. and that had been struck in No. 2 well, as there was a different formation and oil showings. The plan adopted was to core on through to get the lower oil and bring in the two sand together. But before the lower sand was reached, water was struck and it was therefore impossible to test the both sands on the same line. It was a case of letting the upper sand go or drawing back and making a test. The latter course was adopted and it was then found that the sand, owing to the shale and lack of sufficient gas pressure, would not flow. It would have been dangerous to "shoot" as that would have spoiled the hole. The only other alternative was to let the sand go and drill further down.

Since that time, lower sands have been saturated with oil have been picked up. After again considering what to do, it was again decided to go deeper, and that policy is being carried out. The showings of oil are very favorable and it is likely that some more tests will be made soon.

There is also a possibility that further drilling will be done at No. 1 well, which was found to be a gasier, but that question has not been decided yet.
The derrick for the fifth hole, which of course in future will be known and hailed "No. 5"—is now practically completed right down to the installation of the engines and machinery, and the Schieck water drill is now busy completing the sinking of a well for the necessary water supply. The big boilers from No. 4 have been hauled over the half-mile field between the two holes and are being fired in quarters which will stand the colder weather which will be experienced, and we understand that it is full expected to have the No. 5 well "in" by Christmas.

All are working might and main to that end, and with the No. 3 a producer also before that the pipe-line proposition which we are informed is to become "a fait accompli" will surely look like a "good bet".

MAPLE LEAF TUBING HERE
The tubing for the Maple Leaf company is now on the site for the No. 1 well, and the work of inserting this being rushed and it is expected that within a very few days the drillers will have the sands broken up with the heavy gas pressure which is to be forced against the stratum at the bottom of the hole, and that in all likelihood the well will come in with a good flow of light oil of which there are lots of showings.

AT THE BRIT. WAIN.
The derrick for the British-Wainwright Co's drilling on 22-45-6 is being erected this week, all other necessary buildings having been completed. Bill Hare has completed a satisfactory water well for this company, and as soon as the derrick and machinery are installed, the drillers will lose no time in going down after the "greasy beauty".

GRACE METHODIST CHURCH CELEBRATES 16TH ANNIVERSARY
In commemoration of the sixteenth anniversary of the founding of Grace Methodist church in town, it having been inaugurated in 1908, the ladies of that denomination put on a big chicken supper in the restaurant on Saturday last to which nearly the whole town turned out and enjoyed the homely and goodly meal. A nice sum will enrich the treasury as the result of the efforts of these real hard workers, and they must all feel gratified at this outcome.

On Sunday evening the pastor, Rev. G. Pybus preached, a special sermon from Matt. V. for the occasion, his discourse being both appropriate and timely. The choir, which, by the way is now an aggregation of no mean ability also added greatly to the brightening of the service with their special music.
The anthem "Gift up your heads" (Goss) was lifted in spirit, and a mixed quartette by Mr. A. Clark and Steel and Messrs Stott and Morris, was also appreciated. Before the close Mrs. H. Western sang "Woolley's "Consider and hear me," and this proved to be wonderfully well suited to her sweet soprano voice.
The church was well filled for the occasion, and the evening's service was opened with a service of song.

"Captain Blood"

BUCCANEER.

"CAPTAIN BLOOD, BUCCANEER," a Vitaphone picture with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

To satisfy King James's anxiety to conciliate Spain, and in response to the Spanish Ambassador's constant and grievous exhortations, my Lord Sunderland, the Secretary of State, had appointed as a strong man to the deputy-governorship of Jamaica. This strong man was that Colonel Bishop who for some years now had been the most influential planter in Barbados. From his first coming to Jamaica, Colonel Bishop had made himself felt by the buccaneers. But do what he might, the one buccaneer whom he made his particular quarry—that Peter Blood who once had been his slave—eluded him ever. He confessed as much in a letter to the Secretary of State. My Lord Sunderland bethought him of the plan adopted with Morgan who had been enlisted into the King's service under Charles II. It occurred to him that a similar course might be similarly effective with Captain Blood. Acting upon this conclusion, Sunderland sent out his kinsman, Lord Julian, with some commissions made out in blank. The crafty Sunderland, master of all labyrinths of intrigue, advised his kinsman that in the event of his finding Blood intractable or judging for other reasons that it was not desirable to enlist him in the King's service, he should turn his attention to the officers serving under him, and by seducing them away from him leave him so weakened that he must fall an easy victim to Colonel Bishop's fleet.

The Royal Mary made a good passage to St. Nicholas, her last port of call before Jamaica. It was understood that as a preliminary Lord Julian should report himself to the Deputy-Governor of the island, whence he need he might have himself conveyed to Tortuga. Now it happened that the Deputy-Governor's niece had come to St. Nicholas some months earlier on a visit to some relatives, and so that she might escape the insufferable heat of Jamaica in that season. The time for her aboard the Royal Mary, and in view of her uncle's rank and position promptly accorded.

Lord Julian hailed her advent with satisfaction. His lordship was one of your gallants to whom existence that is not graced by womankind is more or less of a stagnation. And Miss Arabella Bishop was a young woman and a lady; and in the latitude late which Lord Julian had strayed, this was a phenomenon sufficiently rare to command attention. On his side with his title and position, his personal grace and the charm of a practiced courtier, he bore about him the atmosphere of the great world in which normally he had his being—a world that was little more than a name to her, who had spent most of her life in the Antilles. It is not therefore wonderful that they should have been attracted to each other before the Royal Mary was warped out of St. Nicholas. Each could tell the other much upon which the other desired information. Considering how his mind was obsessed with the business of his mission, it is not wonderful that he should have come to talk to her of Captain Blood. Indeed, there was a circumstance that directly led to it.

"Look," said Miss Bishop pointing she is English, and she comes resolutely on."

"I wonder now," he said, as they were sauntering on the poop, "if you ever saw this fellow Blood, who was at one time on your uncle's plantation as a slave?"

"I saw him often. I knew him very well."

"Ye don't say!" and came to lean beside her. "And what manner of man did you find him?"

"In those days I esteemed him for an unfortunate gentleman."

"You were acquainted with his story?"

"He told me. That is why I esteemed him—for the calm foreboding with which he bore adversity. Since then considering what he has done, I have almost come to doubt if what he told me of himself was true."

"If you mean of the wrongs he suffered at the hands of the Royal Commission that tried the Monmouth rebels, there's little doubt that it would be true enough. He was never out with Monmouth; that is certain. He was convicted on a point of law which he may have been ignorant of when he committed what was construed into treason. But, faith, he's had his revenge, after a fashion."

"That," she said in a small voice "is the unforfeitable thing. It has destroyed him—deservedly."

"Destroyed him?" His lordship laughed a little. "He none so sure of that. He has grown rich, I hear. He has translated, so it is said, his Spanish spoils into French gold, which is being treasured up for him in France. His future father-in-law, M. d'Ogeron, has seen to that."

"His future father-in-law?" said she, and stared at him round-eyed with parted lips. Then added: "M. d'Ogeron? The Governor of Tortuga?"

"The same. You didn't know?" She shook her head without relying. After a moment she spoke, her voice steady and perfectly controlled.

"But surely, if this were true, there would have been an end to his piracy by now. If he . . . he loved a woman and was betrothed, and was also rich as you say, surely he would have abandoned this degenerate life, and . . ."

"Why, so I thought," his lordship interrupted, "until I had the explanation. D'Ogeron is avaricious for himself and for his child. And as for the girl, I'm told she's a wild piece, fit for such a man as Blood. Almost I marvel that he doesn't marry her and take her ariving with him. It would be no new experience for her. And I marvel, too, at Blood's patience. He killed a man to win her."

"He killed a man for her, do you say? There was horror now in her voice."

"Yes—a French buccaneer named Levasseur. He was the girl's lover and Blood's associate on a venture. Blood coveted the girl, and killed Levasseur to win her. Pahl! It's an unsavory tale, I own. But men live by different

"They must indeed, if his other associates allowed him to live after that 'Oh, the thing was done in fair fight, I am told.'"

"Who told you?"

"A man who sailed with them, a Frenchman named Cahusac, whom I found in a waterside tavern in St. Nicholas. He was Levasseur's lieutenant, and he was present on the island where the thing happened, and when Levasseur was killed."

"And the girl? Did he say the girl was present, too?"

"Yes. She was a witness of the encounter. Blood carried her off when he had disposed of his brother-buccaneer."

"And the dead man's followers allowed it?"

"He caught the note of incredulity in her voice, but missed the note of relief with which it was blest. 'Oh, I don't believe the tale. I won't believe it!'"

"I honor you for that, Miss Bishop. It strained my own belief that men should be so callous, until this Cahusac afforded me the explanation. Blood purchased their consent, and his right to carry the girl off. He paid them in pearls that were worth more than twenty thousand pieces of eight. His lordship laughed again with a touch of contempt. 'A handsome price!'"

"Your Cahusac seems to have accurate enough. Alas!"

"You are sorry then?"

"We are sorry to hear of the death of one we have esteemed. Once I held him in high esteem for an unfortunate, but worthy gentleman. Now . . . Such a man is best forgotten."

"And upon that 'he passed at once to speak of other things."

"The friendship which it was his great gift to command in all she met grew steadily between those two in the little time remaining, until the event befell that marred what was promising to be the pleasant stage of his lordship's voyage."

"The marplot was the mad-dog Spaniard admiral, whom they encountered on the second day out, when half way across the Gulf of Gonaves. A shot from the Milagrosa got among some powder stored in Royal Mary's fore-cabin, and blew up half the ship almost before the fight had started. Before the men of the Royal Mary had recovered from their consternation, their captain killed and a third of their number destroyed with him the ship yawning and rocking helplessly in a crippled state the Spaniards boarded her.

In the captain's cabin, under the poop, to which Miss Bishop had been conducted for safety, Lord Julian was seeking to comfort and encourage her, with assurance that all would yet be well, at the very moment when Don Miguel was stepping aboard afresh. Fortunately, Miss Bishop did not appear to be in desperate need of the poor comfort he was in case to offer. The cabin door flew open and Don Miguel strode in Lord Julian spun round to face him and clapped a hand to his sword.

The Spaniard was brisk and to the point.

"Don't be a fool," he said in his own tongue, "or you'll come by a fool's end. Your ship is sinking. Come, all of you aboard my ship." Don Miguel invited them, and strode out.

As for the survivors in that ghastly shambles that had been the Royal

Mary, they were abandoned by the Spaniards to their own resources. Let them take to the boats and if those did not suffice them, let them swim or drown. If Lord Julian and Miss Bishop were retained, it was because Don Miguel perceived their obvious value. He received them in his cabin.

Lord Julian commanded himself with difficulty to supply them. Then then haughtily he demanded to know in his turn, the name of their aggressor.

"An don Don Miguel de Espinosa," he answered. "Admiral of the navies of the Catholic King."

"Will you tell me, then, why you have like a damned pirate?" Lord Julian asked. "It will cost you dear!"

"All things are possible. Meaning it is your own lives that will cost you dear. Colonel Bishop is a rich man; and you, my lord, are no doubt also rich. I will consider and fix your ransom."

"And you have the impudence to call yourself the Admiral of the navies of the Catholic King?" stormed his lordship.

"It is that I treat you English dogs just as also you English heretic dogs have treated Spaniards upon the seas, you robbers and thieves out of hell. I have the honesty to do it in my own name, but you, you perfidious beasts, you send your Captain Bloods, your Hagthornes and your Morgans against us and disclaim responsibilities for what they do."

"Captain Blood and the rest are not admirals of England!" cried Lord Julian.

"Are they not? How do I know? How does Spain know? Are you not fiars all, you English heretics?"

"Sir!" Lord Julian's voice was harsh as a rasp, his eyes flashed. Instinctively he swung a hand to the place where his sword habitually hung. Then he shrugged and sneered: "Of course," said he, "it's yours with all I have heard of Spanish honor; and all that I have seen of your that you should insult a man who is unarmed and your prisoner."

The admiral's face flamed scarlet. He half raised his hand to strike, and then, restrained, perhaps, by the very words that had cloaked the retorting insult, he turned on his heel abruptly and went out without answering.

The Milagrosa, with her consort the Hilda, calling after her, htered a south by westerly course then veered to the southeast, round Capt Tiburon, and thereafter, standing well out to sea, with the land no more than a cloudy outline to leeward she headed directly east, and so ran straight into the arms of Captain Blood, who was making for the Windward Passage.

That happened early on the following After having systematically hunted his enemy in vain for a year, Don Miguel chanced upon him in this unexpected and entirely fortuitous fashion. It was also the way of Fortune that Don Miguel should thus come upon the Arabella at a time when, separated from the rest of the fleet, she was alone and at a disadvantage. It looked to Don Miguel as if the luck which so long had been on Blood's side had at last veered in his own favor.

Miss Bishop, newly risen, had come out to take the air on the quarterdeck, with his lordship in attendance, when she beheld the big red ship that had once been the Cinco Llagas out of Caiz. The sight thrilled her curiously:

It awoke in her an uplifting sense of pride that took no account of danger to herself in the encounter that must now be inevitable.

Beside her on the poop stood Lord Julian. But he shared none of her exultation. He had been in his first sea fight yesterday, and he felt that the experience would suffice him for a very considerable time.

"Look," said Miss Bishop, pointing Did she realize, he wondered, what was afoot. Had next sentence reshaped his doubt. "She is English, and she comes resolutely on. She means to fight."

"God help her," then said his lordship gloomily. "Her captain must be mad. If they could so easily blow the Royal Mary out of the water, what will they do to this vessel. Look at that devil Don Miguel. He's utterly disgusting in his glee."

GRAIN

Usually the fall market has been criticized for its decline, but this season it is bullish enough to suit the wildest of them. It has been down and up several times and nobody can tell where the swing will settle.—Wheat weather which delayed threshing a week ago has fairly well cleared away and a lot of work has been completed during the latter part of this week. Grades are running low throughout the country, dry weather in the spring, rains which brought field along unevenly, frosts in some of the lower yielding fields, will pull the grade down on a lot of the crop; but the heaviest yielding fields should grade out well.

BUTTERFAT — CHEESE

In all lines of produce the likelihood of the coal mines being reopened will be a great help to business. CREAM-ERY BUTTER—All prices unchanged concerned the market is firm; Mon-is light and so far birds are reported under weight.

CRIME AND THE DUTY
OF PARENTSTo the question, "What is the chief object of education?" the answer of veteran educators is, "To socialize the individual."Facts and knowledge are important in life, but to fill a mind with fragments of the sciences is not to educate the possessor of that mind. Education is essentially training for community life, for co-operation in various fields of legitimate activity, for civilized society.How does it happen that in the words of a distinguished churchman the country is cursed with hosts of youthful criminals? It is known that a large proportion of the burglars, robbers, pickpockets, and even murderers are mere striplings. The painful fact is that the vast sums expended on education fail to deter many youths from criminal careers. Crime statistics and the almost daily reports of concrete criminal cases of the most shocking nature challenge the most serious attention of educators, lawmakers and students of the social and political sciences.Crime is the direct result of many causes, some of which are obscure and indirect in their operation. But there are a few basic causes that are primarily responsible for crime. Lack of proper home training is one of these causes.
Neglect of such discipline may breed juvenile delinquency, but so many unreasonably harsh discipline. Crime may be attributed also to hereditary faint, and it may be traced to manifest physical and emotional defects.It is morally certain, however, that education has not done as much as it might have done in the past to build up character, to guide the emotions, to train the will and to sublimate certain impulses and passions. Where moral training is neglected, where indulgence, idleness and evil associations are permitted, the road to ruin is wide open.There has been much interest in intelligence tests, but emotional tests are of far greater importance. Instability, abnormal willfulness, exaggerated emotion and perversity should be detected early and counteracted at home, in school. Parents and teachers should strive to know the children, they have in their charge and to see to it that those children form good habits instead of bad, are introduced to wholesome literature instead of filthy and poisonous stuff, and are surrounded by decent influences and examples instead of those that are vicious and corrupting.The social, moral and emotional aspects of education should receiveincreasing emphasis and systematic cultivation. But this is a task for parents as well as for teachers. Parents must accept the great responsibility which is theirs.NATIONAL POPPY DAY CAMPAIGNAs each successive anniversary of Armistice Day has passed, the sentiment has become among the people of the Allied nations, more evident showing the reverence in the hearts of the people for the heroic dead who made peace possible.The children of the devastated areas of France gave the nucleus of this idea which has rapidly gained recognition until not only Canada but in Britain, France Italy, and the United States the Poppy is worn in Memoriam of "In Flanders Fields the Poppies Grow", when they gathered the little red poppies and decorated the graves of the fallen heroes near their homes.Each year on November 11th, the proposal has advanced and the wearing of the poppy as an expression of deep reverence for the memory of the dead meets with more sympathetic approval throughout the Country.
Last year there were very few citizens in Canada who did not pay their tribute to the dead in this way.Sentiment in Canada in this desire to honour the fallen is even stronger.
The Great War Veterans' Association of Canada are sponsoring this Campaign with three worthy objects in view:1. The inauguration of the custom of wearing a poppy as a memorial flower on Armistice Day, and thus cherish in perpetuity the memory of the Sacred Dead.2. A means of providing employment in Alberta to disabled Veterans in making up those poppies. These disabled Veterans are not in a position to compete with factory, child labour
3. Extending much needed assistance to disabled and dependents by the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada.Poppies are being on sale in each town in the Province where there is a Branch of the G.W.V.A., and where there is no branch, other organizations or private individuals are handling the poppies.The Provincial Secretary is anxious to make the Poppy Campaign a huge success this year, and eager to increase the number of poppies required each year thereby increasing the amount of employment that can be given to our disabled and their dependents. Baron Byng of Vimy said:
"Remember the Dead by helping the Living."

BULLETIN FROM PROVINCIAL GOVT.

Edmonton Bye-Election

Four candidates were officially nominated this week to contest the bye-election in Edmonton for the vacancy created in the Provincial Legislature by the resignation of Hon. J. R. Boyle. The candidates are H. M. Bartholomew, Labor; A. F. Ewing, Conservative; W. T. Henry, Liberal; Gerald Peton, Independent Liberal. Election day is on October 27th.

Has Charge of New Course

W. J. Elliott, former principal of Claresholm Agricultural School and latterly with the livestock branch of the United Grain Growers, has been appointed by the provincial department of agriculture to take charge of the training of the British boys who will come to Alberta for special courses in practical agriculture at the Vermilion School of Agriculture, east of Edmonton. Under this plan which was evolved by Hon. Geo. Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture, in conjunction with the British Overseas Settlement Board, young men of from 18 to 25 years of age will be brought to Alberta for special training in agriculture before going on to the land. There are now fifty of these young men on the way to Alberta to take this course, they having sailed this week. More will follow later.

Alberta Stock Wins Again

Alberta cattle were to the front in the prize winnings at the annual stock and feeder show at Winnipeg, Manitoba, last week. Mr. Minnick, of the Peace River District, won first and second for the best five Shorthorn steers. Wright of Lloydminster won first in carload of Shorthorns, while Poynter Bros. of Monitor, won first in the Hereford classes. At the Saskatchewan show at Moose Jaw, Alberta men also won prizes.

Crows' Nest Railway Rates

Consequent upon the cancellation by the Railway Commissioners of Canada, of the Crows' Nest Pass railway rate agreement, Premier Greenfield representing the Alberta government views, made the following statement: "The Government of Alberta considers the maintenance of the Crows' Nest Pass agreement absolutely essential to western producers. The decision handed down by the Board of Railway Commissioners looks like the beginning of a long fight."

"The Provincial Government acted jointly with the governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan in the recent hearing at Ottawa, and expect to continue that arrangement."

"Unquestionably an appeal will be taken to higher authority. What the nature of the appeal will be, will not be decided until the government has an opportunity to study the judgment of the Board and co-operate with the Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan."

Labor Placements

During the month of September the Alberta Government Employment Service was able to place a total of 6,658 men in jobs, out of a total of 7,759 applications, of which 662 were withdrawn by the applicants. Of this total 5,049 placements were in agriculture, the majority being harvest hands. During the first two weeks in September the employment service was able to fill 4,617 places out of 4,846 in comparison with Saskatchewan's placement of 4,425 out of 10,544 orders.

Alberta Butter Exports Growing

Alberta is fast climbing to the front as an exporter of high quality creamery butter to the markets of the world. In 1922, the total exports of butter from this province to world markets reached scarcely 1,000,000 lbs. In 1923 the total had grown to nearly 2,000,000 lbs., and in 1924, to date the total exported by the end of that year will be over 4,000,000 lbs. by the end of the year. If the same rate of increase is maintained during 1925, the total exported by the end of that year will have reached 8,000,000 lbs. or nearly half the present day grand total of all creamery butter produced in the province.

The bulk of butter exported from Alberta goes to Great Britain, but other foreign markets include several of the United States, China, Japan and even Manila. In the British Market Alberta butter has been established as a distinct product, and Alberta firms are now shipping to that market butter that not only appears under its own grand name, but also is trading very closely on the heels of the famous Danish and New Zealand product with respect to quality.

COMPASS DOES NOT TURN NORTH

The magnetic compass has been used for more than 600 years and today is more widely employed than ever before by miners underground, by explorers, travellers, hunters, trappers, prospectors, pioneers, timber cruisers and others overland; by navigators on the seas, and by airmen high above the earth. With this small, delicate, restless instrument they are enabled to tell direction. Yet contrary to popular belief the magnetic compass does not point due north, but more or less eastward or westward of it at different places. At Halifax it points twenty two degrees west of north, at Vancouver twenty-five degrees east of north while at Fort McPherson, on the Mackenzie river within the Arctic circle it points forty-four degrees east of north. Scientists state that this is because the magnetic poles of the earth are not situated at the geographical poles as shown on our maps of the world.

The problem of the compass is still further complicated by the fact that it changes its direction from year to year. It marches to the westward for many years, then turns backward and marches to the westward, etc. Moreover, its very confusing behaviour is quite different in different places. Whether this is caused by a shifting of the magnetic poles, by changes within the earth itself, or by some influence of the sun or planets scientists are not yet able to determine. In order that the compass may be used with reliance therefore, the different countries of the world carry out magnetic surveys to measure its exact direction, and supply the information to the public in the form of magnetic maps. Owing to the continual shifting or "march" of the compass as it is called, the work accomplished by a magnetic survey would soon become obsolete, unless proper corrections are applied; so this march is measured at certain points and the work corrected accordingly from time to time.

This information is particularly valuable in such a large new country as Canada, and it is therefore, interesting to note that one of the largest magnetic surveys in the world is being made in this country by the Topographical Survey of Canada whose field parties cover such wide areas on their land surveys. The cost is very slight because these measurements take but a minute or two are made during spare moments in the land surveys.

Of necessity now, undiminished sail, the advance of the Arabella was slower but it was none the less steady. She was already within shaker shot and they could make out the figures stirring on her forecastle and the brass guns gleaming on her prow. The gunners of the Milagrosa raised their linestocks and blew upon their smoldering matches, looking up impatiently at the admiral. But the admiral only shook his head.

"Stalk me," said his lordship. "The Englishman may be gallant enough to accept battle against such odds. But there are times when discretion is a better quality than gallantry in a commander. Presently you will suffer me to place you under cover."

"I can see best from here," she answered him. And added quietly, "I am praying for this Englishman. He must be a brave."

The Arabella was advancing now along a course which, if continued, must carry her straight between the two Spanish ships.

But even at that moment the Admiral raised his hand; in the waist, below him, trumpet blared, and immediately the gunner on the prow touched off his guns. As the thunder of them rolled out, the lordship and the lieutenant of the main line, splashed about at once two successive spurts of flame leapt from the brass cannon on the Arabella's beakhead, and scarcely had the watchers on the poop seen the shower of spray, where one of the shots struck the water near them than, with a rending crash and a shiver that shook the Milagrosa from stem to stern, the other came to lodge in her forecastle. To average that blow, the Hidalgo blazed at the Englishman with both her forward guns. But even at that short range (between two and three hundred yards) neither shot took effect.

At a hundred yards the Arabella's forward guns, which had meanwhile been reloaded, fired again at the Milagrosa, and this time smashed her bowsprit into splinters, so that for a moment she yawed wildly to port. Don Miguel swore profanely, and then, as the helm was put over to the right, he said:

LUNCH COUNTER CARS ON NATIONAL

LUNCH counter cars which will care for the needs of passengers in the colonist, first class and tourist cars of the main line trains, if they desire to patronize them, are to be operated by the Canadian National Railway for the convenience of the travelling public, and particularly of immigrants arriving in Canada. As an experiment, lunch counter cars have been placed in service between Winnipeg and Toronto. While these trains carry dining cars and while the Canadian National Railway also has lunch counters and restaurants at all divisional points, it is considered that the lunch counter car will be a great benefit to women travelling with children, and to others who may be physically unfit or unable to leave the train at stations because of severe weather, or for other reasons.

The lunch counter has been fitted up at one end of a steel colonist car, where the best grade of tea and coffee freshly made will be served. Light meals comprising cereals, sandwiches, pies, preserved fruits and other canned goods will be available at Canadian National standard lunch counter prices. A competent and courteous attendant will be in charge of each lunch counter and service may be secured at any time during the day.

The suggestion of the lunch counter cars was made by Mr. Walter Pratt, General Manager of Dining, Sleeping and Parlor Cars and of Hotels, who has been anxious to provide this facility to further improve travelling conditions and add to the comforts of passengers on the Canadian National Railway.

TO THE VICTORS BELONG THE SPOILS

The petroleum industry must attract capital. In this respect it is no different from any other industry does differ from the average business. These are the tremendous growth and the natural hazards.

Possibly no other industry has the burden of financing which is placed on the oil business in consequence of the multiplying of essential demand for products. The only reason why the hundreds of millions of dollars of capital have been forthcoming to finance necessary expansion is that the people who had the money thought they could make a profit.

It is generally recognized that the oil business is one of the most hazardous and uncertain of industries. This being fundamental in that it relates to the idiosyncrasies of finding oil and to the whims of well production—in other words, to the industry's raw material—it would follow that to attract necessary capital the industry would be forced to offer high returns in the way of dividends to stockholders.

This alone would seem a justification for high rates of earnings, assuming that operations were sufficiently successful over a period of a year to make it possible to show any profit at all, for, granted the hazard and uncertainty, there are bound to be lean years.

When the hazards of the search for oil and of production when found are considered, the annual losses incurred even in the most conservative operation, constitute a material reduction in the working capital of the industry. This means that not only must sufficient new investment be found to keep the production of oil abreast of the steady growth of consumption but to replace that thus irretrievably lost.

Persons who invest their money in an enterprise so precarious naturally expect, as a reward for the risk they take, to gain more return than their fellows who insist upon an "absolute" investment. The investor who takes no risks can not hope to win the larger reward which alone attracts of other men to hazard his money on a chance of success. The cautious man who "plays safe" has no reason to be jealous of his more adventurous brother's getting a larger return. If he gets any at all. The man who takes the risk has earned it.

Looking at it in that way which is the only sensible way to look at it, it is evident that, if the oil industry is to continue to attract the capital needed to maintain the nation's supply of oil anything that will tend to interfere with the hope of reward which leads men to take those risks will be a public misfortune. If men are to be limited in the return for their investment in oil operations, with all the hazards that go with it to merely the same returns as the man who buys Government bonds or other stable securities why should any one choose the risk when he can get as much without taking it?

Any form of regulation or restriction that will have that effect will check the flow of new money into the oil business and correspondingly lessen operations and the chance of finding new production. Any decline in production, in turn, must mean an advance in prices. If the public understood the immediate relationship between whose money is needed to finance the growth of the industry and the supply and prices of petroleum products there would be less misjudging of the oil business.

AND THAT WAS WHY

"So sorry to hear that your husband has been drinking again, Mrs. Miggs. Of course, drunkenness is a disease. He ought to be treated by a physician."

"Bless ye, 'e wouldn't moid that, sir! When me 'usband's 'ad a drop, 'e don't care 'oo treats 'im."

Mrs. "How is the weather?" Miss: "Fresh and windy." "Very well. I'll put a healthy flush on my cheeks this morning. I am going out."

WISE AND OTHERWISE

"Is it true that Bill has married again?"

"Yes, he's under entirely new management!"

Ashe: "He's a regular miser; he locks up everything."

Beeche: "I've noticed he even bolts his food."

Mr. Young: "Which do you prefer, boys or girls?"

Mr. Old: "Boys. My daughters steal my cigarettes."

I love my relations, forgive my friends, am indifferent to my enemies, and envy nobody—Mrs. Asquith.

There are those who find it easier to look wise than to act wisely.

When a man succeeds in getting his wife to believe all that he says, he should join the Diplomatic Corps.

Fire losses in Canada during the week ended Sept. 3rd were $1,052,221, compared with $760,000 the previous week and, with $604,000 during the corresponding week of last year.

A good son maketh a good husband—but he is worthy of a better fate.

Wireless waves can leap through 120 feet of solid rock almost as swiftly through free air.

It is always a dangerous thing to ask a child to express a personal opinion.

On being asked by his son to explain the meaning of the word 'honesty,' a Jew replied:—"My son, the word 'honesty' is a very difficult thing to define. People have so many different and varied views on the subject but I think I can explain to you in no better way than this: Supposing you went to the bank with a customer's cheque for $50, and the cashier gave you by mistake

"What you seem to want, friends," said this stranger to the earnest young reformers, "is a place where every person has got to be good by law."

"That's it," they agreed.

"Where smoking is not allowed and drink unknown. Where no one need worry about food and clothes. Where everyone has to go to church, and everyone keeps regular hours."

"Oh to find such a place!" exclaimed a soulful fellow.

"Easily found," replied the stranger. "I've just come on from doing twelve months in one."

The waiting customers in a barber's shop were sitting round the room on a wooden bench, reading and yawning. The barber was busy singeing a man's hair.

Suddenly two Cockney urehins looked in at the open door. After a moment one of them said to his companion: "Lumme, look at that chap. He's 'avin' 'em looked for with a light!"

"That's a pretty girl I saw you with last night."

"Yes, that's Birdie Nest!"

"And why do you call her Birdie?"

"Because she's pigeon toed, has crow's feet, her mother calls her a goose, while her father feathered her nest, and she has a bill with everybody."
